

Jo and Sita the Tribal Chiefs

By Arron

Y4 POW! Group, Parkdale Primary School

Ten thousand years ago on Thunder Island, in the middle of the Pacific Ocean, where Jo's tribe lived, there was a tremendously big volcano.

Jo was the bravest of his tribe and by far the most fierce. His anger made him a deadly threat to others. He was a strong, fast and fierce leader of the Incey tribe. He hated the other tribe and threatened to destroy them. Jo loved to ride on his lightning board and usually sabotaged the other tribe by throwing lightning at them.

One day Jo gathered his tribe together and told them to attack the other tribe because he wanted to take over the island. The other tribe thought the same thing. They were spying on them. They got ready for war.

Jo took a short cut through Sandviller. He jumped over every sand trap and made a mistake and fell in some quick sand up to his chin. Suddenly, he threw a lightning rod onto a nearby tree and jumped out using the lightning rod to heave himself out. He was relieved that he was alive.

Jo continued his journey to the other tribe. Meanwhile the other tribe were getting ready for battle. They were led by Sita, a fierce leader.

Whilst they were fighting each other the volcano god became furious. He made the volcano erupt. The others heard a bang and looked up in horror at the volcano. Lava was pouring out of the volcano like a fountain. They were horrified at the lava pouring out so fast. Everyone hurried towards the ocean.

They swam rapidly on and on until the two tribes reached dinosaur territory. As they crawled onto the island really exhausted they could only see an ocean of red hot lava behind them. They knew that they would have to work together to use their powers to escape the island and all its dangers.

Will they be able to find their way home?